

The salt wind off the harbor carried the smell of rope and paint, and the morning light made the wet quay shine like polished stone. Every page of this document repeats the same running header and footer so the converter can learn to remove them.

The page number changes on each page, forming a small sequence at the bottom edge of the page. Removing the repeated furniture and the page numbers should leave only the body paragraphs behind.

A third paragraph gives the page enough body text to keep the document firmly in the text classification, surrounded on both sides by content that belongs to the page frame.

The salt wind off the harbor carried the smell of rope and paint, and the morning light made the wet quay shine like polished stone. Every page of this document repeats the same running header and footer so the converter can learn to remove them.

The page number changes on each page, forming a small sequence at the bottom edge of the page. Removing the repeated furniture and the page numbers should leave only the body paragraphs behind.

A third paragraph gives the page enough body text to keep the document firmly in the text classification, surrounded on both sides by content that belongs to the page frame.

The salt wind off the harbor carried the smell of rope and paint, and the morning light made the wet quay shine like polished stone. Every page of this document repeats the same running header and footer so the converter can learn to remove them.

The page number changes on each page, forming a small sequence at the bottom edge of the page. Removing the repeated furniture and the page numbers should leave only the body paragraphs behind.

A third paragraph gives the page enough body text to keep the document firmly in the text classification, surrounded on both sides by content that belongs to the page frame.

The salt wind off the harbor carried the smell of rope and paint, and the morning light made the wet quay shine like polished stone. Every page of this document repeats the same running header and footer so the converter can learn to remove them.

The page number changes on each page, forming a small sequence at the bottom edge of the page. Removing the repeated furniture and the page numbers should leave only the body paragraphs behind.

A third paragraph gives the page enough body text to keep the document firmly in the text classification, surrounded on both sides by content that belongs to the page frame.

The salt wind off the harbor carried the smell of rope and paint, and the morning light made the wet quay shine like polished stone. Every page of this document repeats the same running header and footer so the converter can learn to remove them.

The page number changes on each page, forming a small sequence at the bottom edge of the page. Removing the repeated furniture and the page numbers should leave only the body paragraphs behind.

A third paragraph gives the page enough body text to keep the document firmly in the text classification, surrounded on both sides by content that belongs to the page frame.

The salt wind off the harbor carried the smell of rope and paint, and the morning light made the wet quay shine like polished stone. Every page of this document repeats the same running header and footer so the converter can learn to remove them.

The page number changes on each page, forming a small sequence at the bottom edge of the page. Removing the repeated furniture and the page numbers should leave only the body paragraphs behind.

A third paragraph gives the page enough body text to keep the document firmly in the text classification, surrounded on both sides by content that belongs to the page frame.